

How do you see yourself in five years from now as a student?

Top 4 answers

1. I see myself exactly as I see myself today—study every day, reading books, attending every lecture, trying my best. Sure enough, I'll be five years older, studying in another place, meeting other teachers. But in my opinion your attitude matters the most, and I want to keep the same attitude to studying as I have now.
2. I have a beautiful vision on my mind. Being in the last year of vet school, almost ready to start practicing the medicine, having like-minded smart people around, and doing something for the student community. And I imagine still enjoying my studies, because I really want to work as a vet, and believe I will enjoy the process—though it won't be easy for sure, and I will have to study a lot.
3. I see myself thriving at your school. But not only in the lessons, which I will no doubt enjoy. I also imagine taking active part in the community, working as a resident assistant, participating in events, having fun. Of course, I know I will have to study a lot to pass the exams and eventually graduate. But I also believe that once we organize our time properly, and do not waste time with social networks or computer games, we can handle quite a lot on every day.
4. Honestly, speaking, I have no idea so far. Many things interest me, and I have not discovered my calling yet. In five years I may be studying at the college, but I may also be working, living abroad, I may do this or that. Sure enough, we learn something our entire life. Maybe I won't be a college student, but I'll be learning completely different lessons out there. And I can assure you that I still find life interesting, and look forward to my future. Though I do not know what it will be at the moment.

Source, 7 sample answers & more: <https://teacher-interviewquestions.com/how-do-you-see-yourself-in-5-years-from-now-as-a-student/>